

How Property Passes at Death

Transfer of Assets

Deed

- Property owned jointly with survivorship rights passes to the surviving joint owner.

Contract

- A life insurance policy is an example of a contract that pays death benefits to a named beneficiary.

Will

- All remaining property is distributed according to the terms of the will.

Law

- If you have no will, the remaining property is distributed according to state intestacy law.